

Yahya Abulhaj

Everything Cloud and DevOps.

AWS Community Builder, Microsoft Certified Trainer, DevOps Consultant

¿The Real Who

Hey again there.
You could be correct.
You might also be mistaken.
If you believe this is a resume.

I'm relatively fresh to the cloud; I consciously launched my journey in May 2021.

I began sitting for Microsoft Fundamentals and John Savill hard saved me back then.
I got hooked in the cloud improvement cycle and I did much more certs later.
I recorded the cloud-related strategies that fueled some of my success.

I scored a free internship at Linedata by the end of my 2nd year in college for month.

By its end, I received a call offering me a full-time position where I grew to this.
During this, I implemented things like Microsoft Sentinel and OpenCTI.

This 2023, I performed two bootcamps.
One lasting almost a year.
The other brief month.

You can find me on LinkedIn, coding good stuff to GitHub or sharing insights on X.

Overcoming History

Bachelor In Computer Engineering

I've walked the high school path 6-3-4yrs.

- Followed by a bachelors of Sc. program.

Public universities are tough.

However, I didn't back down at all.

I tried my best to help and make a difference.